

Election Observers and Electoral Fraud

Joseph Asunka, Sarah Brierley,
Miriam Golden, Eric Kramon, and George Ofosu

University of California, Los Angeles

Version 2.5*

For a copy of this paper, please contact the corresponding author directly.

June 16, 2013

*Corresponding author: Miriam Golden, golden@ucla.edu. Prepared for presentation at the 17th Annual Conference of The International Society for New Institutional Economics, June 20–22, 2013, Florence, Italy. We received useful comments on an earlier versions of this paper presented at a Workshop on Electoral Integrity, Violence, and Vote-Buying, Center on Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law, Program on Poverty and Governance, Stanford University, April 12–13, 2013. Funding for the research reported here was provided by the U.K.'s Department for International Development, Ghana Office and by a National Science Foundation Grant for Rapid Response Research (RAPID), SES–1265247, neither of which bear any responsibility for the results reported here. We gratefully acknowledge the help of our research partner in Ghana, the Centre for Democratic Development, as well as Ghana's Coalition of Domestic Election Observers, whose collaboration made our research possible. We also thank our 300 research assistants for data collection.